

made. Conning has dropped its mask, and now seizes the sword-force. The Union or Abolition—that is the issue. Let the people of the United States now meet it. Let all good and true men now take their stand, and separate themselves forever from those who, to the disturbance of the Union, would wrap the South in flames and blood. For ourselves, we rejoice that the issue is made. Let the secret traitor be turned into an open enemy, and the people have nothing to fear. The Union will endure, and move on, whilst their festering carcasses will be crushed beneath its wheels—the abhorrence and scorn of the mighty and free people whose destiny it bears.

Resolved. That the thanks of the friends of liberty, universally, and especially in Massachusetts, are due to John Quincy Adams, for his bold, faithful, and indefatigable advocacy of the rights of petition, under circumstances of great difficulty and peril; and that the secretaries of this meeting be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to John Quincy Adams, in the name of this meeting, as a slight token of its high appreciation of his conduct in such an emergency, and of its determination to sustain him in every constitutional effort that he may make in favor of the rights of man, irrespective of complexional differences.

Resolved. That when the Senators and Representatives of this Commonwealth, in Congress, find themselves deprived of the liberty of speech on its floor, and prohibited from defending the rights of their constituents to petition, they ought at once to withdraw and return to their several homes, leaving the people of Massachusetts to devise such ways and means for a redress of their grievances as they shall deem necessary.

Resolved. That the nation of liberty and slavery, in one just and equal compact, is that which it is not in the power of God or man to achieve, because it is a moral impossibility, as the peaceful amalgamation of fire and gunpowder; and, therefore, the American Union is such only in form, but not in substance—a hollow mockery instead of a glorious reality.

Resolved. That if the South be madly bent upon perpetrating her atrocious slave system, and thereby destroying the liberty of speech and of the press, and striking down the rights of northern citizens, the time is rapidly approaching when the American Union will be dissolved in form as it is now in fact.

Oration of Edmund Quincy.

Voted. That the proceedings of this meeting be printed, and signed by the officers of this meeting, and copies transmitted to Daniel O'Connell, and Theobald Mathew, and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with a request that they be laid before that body—also, that they be published in the papers of this city.

From the Temperance Advocate.

A MANURE STRAWER.

Mr. Editor:—I send you a description of a Manure Straver, which I have used for two years—it does finely for strewing manure in drill, either for corn or cotton, there is more regularity, and the cotton much more uniform in size than when manure is scattered by hand. A hand and horse, or mule, or ox, or cow, as much land in a day with this fixture, as a hand and horse will open with a plough for plowing, with the exception of the time consumed in filling up the hoghead. If the manure is not pulverized, I mean tolerably fine, the holes ought to be larger than I have stated; if it is fine, the holes may be smaller. This could be regulated by a hoop of iron about the breadth of those on large hogheads, made to go loosely round the hoghead near the holes, to be slipped over when the manure is fine.

Respectfully yours,

DESCRIPTION.

A sugar hoghead, or any large hoghead, with fellows placed on it, with an axle tree to pass entirely through, and a shaft attached at each end, to be drawn by one horse, after the manner of rolling. To be used to market formerly, with this difference however, that instead of the axle tree revolving it remains stationary; and instead of a tongue, shafts. At the middle or largest diameter of the hoghead, there is to be, say another wheel, which I call the rubber; this rubber has a square hole morticed in the centre, through which the axle tree passes, and must like the axle tree, not revolve. The rubber must not come nearer than an inch of the staves, comprising the hoghead, or its lower semi-circle, and on the upper semi-circle it is of no importance, if it should not reach to within four or five inches of the staves. The middle or largest circumference of the hoghead is cut in holes about 4 inches square and about 2 inches apart. Through these holes the manure drops; and a door, was sawed large enough to admit to be emptied a box or basket, which will hold one or two bushels. This door is to be hung with iron hinges made expressly. They (the hinges) answering the place of battens, are to be long enough to reach across every stave composing the door, with a nail or screw in each stave. It will be sufficient if the other end of the hinge reaches across three or four staves. The door when shut, is fastened with one or two battens of wood, as may suit best.

Each end of the hoghead should have a thick batten nailed across the heading to strengthen the heads and to prevent the axle tree from wearing. The hole at each end and through which the axle passes, should not be less than three inches in diameter. A hole through the end of each shaft, with a string running through, and tied to the hames, with a live from the bridle to the rear of the hoghead, where the driver stands, is all the harness necessary. The driver carries a hoe with a short handle, or a shovel, and a basket or box, holding as before stated, to fill up the hoghead when required.

Good for colic.—There is a vast deal of truth in the following, written by some descendant of Adam, with whose locality & titles we are not familiar. Our strength grows out of weakness. Not until we are pricked and stung and sorely shot at, awakens the indignation which arms itself with secret forces. A great man is always willing to be little. Whilst he sits on the cushion of advantages, he goes to sleep.

Whilst he is hushed, tormented, defeated, he has a chance to learn something; he has been hit on his wit; on his manhood; he has gained facts; learns his ignorance; is cured of the insanity of conceit; has got moderation and real skill. The wise man always throws himself on the side of his assailants. It is more his interest than it is theirs to find his weak position. The wound cleaveth and falls off from him like a dead skin, and when they would triumph—lo! he has passed on invulnerable. Blame is safer than praise. I hate to be defended in a new shipper. As long as all that is said is laid against me, I feel a certain assurance of success. But as soon as honored words of praise are spoken of me, I feel as one that lies unprotected before his enemies. In general, every evil to which we do not succumb, is a benefactor. As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptation we resist.

'I understand,' said a denizen to one of his neighbors, 'that you are becoming a hard drinker.' 'That is slander,' replied the neighbor, 'for no man can drink eternally.'

A fearful calamity to a Lawyer.—A celebrated lawyer a short time since, when reaching the climax of his argument, endeavored to give burst to a vent of stinging eloquence, when his tongue flew off in the violent effort, struck the judge in the forehead, and knocked him off the bench. His honor rose in great wrath, and ordered him to be imprisoned for contempt of court. As the poor law of the law was no longer able to speak for himself he was judged without ceremony.

PROSPECTUS,

FOR THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE MAGNOLIA.

THE December number closes the 31 volume of this periodical, and recal-culating the attention of our friends to a new volume, it is our happiness to state, that having overcome, in some measure, the difficulties incident to the transfer of our work from the interior to this city, and other changes, we are now enabled to assure our subscribers that the "Magnolia," is placed upon a permanent foundation—its circulation is established, and its continuance secured. To effect this more certainly, one-half of the work has been disposed of, under such terms and contracts as will essentially subserve its interests. It will, henceforth, be issued in an enlarged form, having a monthly addition of 16 pages, handsomely printed on superior paper, making at the close of the year, a volume of nearly 500 double columned pages. It will be punctually issued, positive arrangements to that effect have been made with the publisher, and the many hindrances which have hitherto impeded its progress having been overcome. In addition to the usual contributions from eminent writers the Editor has pleasure in saying, that he will be assisted in the literary department by some gentlemen whose aid will greatly enhance the value of the periodical, and impart additional interest to its pages. It is the desire of the Editor to make the "Magnolia" a standard popular Magazine, and to accomplish this, he is determined to devote to it every energy, in order to mark it worthy of the patronage of the friends of Southern literature. To such he presents his claims, confident that the growing reputation of the work; and the peculiar advantages under which it will hereafter be issued, will lead them to sustain, by liberal subscriptions, a periodical whose intrinsic value is now so much increased.

Terms for the enlarged volume, the same as for the former, $5 a year, in advance.

Editors, to whom the "Magnolia" is sent, are respectfully requested to insert this Prospectus.

Savannah Geo. Dec 11.

PROSPECTUS

FOR THE SECOND VOLUME OF THE Southern Botanical-Medical JOURNAL.

THE publication of this Journal will be continued—the Second Volume commencing on the 1st of January, 1842. It will be issued in numbers of sixteen pages each, three times a month—on the first, tenth and twentieth—instead of the first and fifteenth, as hitherto; thus furnishing our Subscribers with the same amount of matter, and saving them about half the postage. It will continue to be the uncompromising advocate of the principles and practice of the Thomsonian system, which tends, as we believe, to the best temporal interests of the human family, in instructing them in the art of preserving health and prolonging life; and will, we trust, contribute its share in the progressive march of Medical reformation now taking such rapid strides in every section of our beloved country. Our best energies shall be devoted to render it one of the most useful and entertaining publications of the kind now publishing.
